When resources are scarce, it can be a challenge to feel like you’re thriving. Many in our community were out of work, and all of us were isolated in our homes during the months of the pandemic. At times, I felt like the museum was simply persevering. With the start of the pandemic, we faced a ban on in-person gatherings and the closure of the museum. Even as we reopened, we could hold programs only virtually. Everything felt restricted and challenging.

If you are familiar with the story of Stone Soup, I want to suggest that, in this time of scarcity, I felt much like the hungry traveler carrying nothing but a pot. I did wander into that village though, and ended up with a tasty stew when all was said and done. In the story, the hungry travelers put a stone and water in their pot and they place it over a fire. What the RJD had in its pot throughout the pandemic was our wonderful staff and board, as well as the gorgeous garden—these things were our stone and water. In the story, the villagers take an interest in what’s going on; one person contributes carrots—another contributes some greens—until the soup is enough to feed the village. The comparison to the story breaks a little here since at no time was the RJD tricking people to contribute, yet they did: in the form of showing up. And the grounds hosted multiple wedding celebrations, family programs, social gatherings, garden enthusiasts, and casual picnickers. The “villagers” showed up. They shared. And they made the museum look and feel like a thriving organization again.

As we find a new normal and get back to things we might have missed these past two years, I am encouraged by the support for this organization that comes not just from your donations or membership, but from you sharing with us—your stories, your interests, your energy, and your family and friends.

Hope to see you soon.

Dawn E. Salerno
Executive Director
The RJD Welcomes New Staff

Claudio Pereira joined the RJD staff in January 2022 as the Functions and Sales Coordinator. He was born and raised in New Bedford and attended Greater New Bedford Regional Vocational Technical High School and Bristol Community College. His career in hospitality began at New Bedford’s Airport Grille in 2009. In addition to hospitality, Claudio has over 20 years of customer service experience at various companies including Compass Bank, SOCO Magazine, and Fay’s Restaurant & Knotty Pine Catering. More recently, Claudio has joined the team at South Coast Elite Real Estate Group in Fairhaven.

“In January of 2020, my partner Ryan and I started planning our wedding. We saw venue after venue. On the day we came to tour the RJD garden, we knew that this was the location we wanted to plan our day around. That planning of our own wedding inspired my return to the world of events and hospitality. I am thrilled to be working with the RJD house and museum; a place of history that has become part of my personal history as well.”

Planning an event? Please give Claudio a call at the museum! Or email Functions@rjdmuseum.org.

What's New

Staff and Board have been busy implementing the four goals of RJD’s Strategic Plan, 2021-2026. Two of those goals strive towards the vision that the RJD will represent diverse histories, voices and perspectives. We acknowledged that we could not be that museum without inviting more people into the discussion. Here are some highlights of those efforts:

NextGen and D & I Committees

A group has recently been formed to advise the RJD on ways to engage the millennial audience (those born between 1981 and 1996). This group of nine individuals represents a diversity of backgrounds and experience. The “NextGen” committee began meeting in early 2022. How does this community perceive the RJD Museum? What types of activities would they like to participate in?

A similar advisory group was formed as the Diversity and Inclusion Committee. From museum signage to how the museum works with community groups, this committee is vital to the work of becoming a more inclusive organization.

Individuals serve on these committees as volunteers: we acknowledge and thank them for their gift of time, knowledge, and honesty. Interested in one of these committees? Contact Executive Director, Dawn Salerno (dsalerno@rjdmuseum.org).

Museum Membership

The Museum launched a new discounted membership rate just for City residents. The resident membership program engages us more with the local community and reinforces our long-standing ties to the City.

All RJD Members can enjoy the new Perks Program. Each quarter of the year features new perks, in addition to the regular annual Museum Member benefits. Perks are coordinated in partnership with local businesses so that Members can explore all the great activities New Bedford has to offer. Contact HFortin@rjdmuseum.org or visit our web site to view details about the latest perk.

July – September: On weekdays, members visiting the garden can receive a freshly clipped rose. Our local business partner perk: School of Yoga New Bedford

October – December: Members can enjoy a view of the city from the museum’s cupola. Please call ahead to schedule this type of visit. Our local business partner perk: The Drawing Room.
Reflecting the Past: New Bedford Glass

BY LAUREN PRESCOTT

History of Glassmaking
Glassmaking emerged around 2300 B.C.E. though it is not clear whether glass was first made in Ancient Egypt or Mesopotamia (present-day Iraq and northern Syria). We know more about early glassmaking in Egypt, partly because of the ancient Egyptian custom of burying the dead with objects they believed would be needed in the afterlife, and also because of that country’s dry climate, which is conducive to the preservation of glass. Syrian craftsmen discovered glassblowing in the 1st century. Their technique produced glassware faster than others and as a result, glassware became attainable for more than just the wealthy classes. Syria also exported luxury and common glassware throughout the Roman empire.

Glass was a material common to everyday Roman life. It was also used for windows, mirrors, jewelry, magnifying glasses and serving ware such as cups, bottles, plates and bowls. Romans used glass for its decorative qualities as well, incorporating it into mosaics and furniture.

New Bedford
The glass industry began in New Bedford in March of 1867 when the fires were lit at New Bedford Glass Works. But due to financial difficulties, the plant closed just a few years later in 1869. Mount Washington Glass Works, established in South Boston in 1837, purchased the defunct New Bedford Glass Works factory and moved to New Bedford in 1869. Mount Washington always manufactured glass in the latest styles, including many types of art glass. Art glass refers to colorful decorative pieces intended for the parlors and dining rooms of Victorian homes. Mount Washington operated from 1870 to 1894, producing some of the most beautiful American art glass of the Victorian Era.

In 1880, Mount Washington hired English silversmith, Thomas Pairpoint, to run the Pairpoint Manufacturing Corporation, a silver company adjacent to Mount Washington. Pairpoint manufactured all types of household goods, including silverware, tableware and jewelry. Although Pairpoint was initially run as a separate company, in 1894 the two merged and became the Pairpoint Corporation.

New Bedford Glass: An Era of Quality
Although the management and names of New Bedford’s principal glass factory changed several times over a 90-year span, they all became synonymous with fine quality hand-made glass.

By 1897, when New Bedford celebrated its semi-centennial, Pairpoint had 1,200 employees. The first quarter of the 20th century was a period of great prosperity for Pairpoint. The company introduced a variety of both glass and silver products and established itself as a leader of the industry.

The End of Glassblowing in New Bedford
Several factors led to the demise of glassblowing in New Bedford. The Great Depression, manufacturing abroad, mainly in the United Kingdom and Japan, as well as the demand for high wages in industry in the U.S., made it difficult to keep up with competitors.

The company ceased operations in New Bedford in December 1956. On October 2, 1965, a fire ripped through the old Pairpoint factory, completely destroying it. The Pairpoint mill fire was one of the toughest that firefighters battled in the city’s history. It required the aid of firefighters from surrounding towns, and the flames were so intense that they blew horizontally out the brick factory windows.

Glass remnants from the fire are on display at the RJD, along with New Bedford glassware from the 19th and 20th centuries. The exhibit case includes items from RJD’s permanent collection, as well as pieces from retired New Bedford glassblower, Alfred J. Aubut Jr.

OUR HISTORY.
YOUR LOVE STORY.

CELEBRATE YOUR UNION IN THE LUSH HISTORIC GARDENS LOCATED AT THE RJD MUSEUM IN THE HEART OF DOWNTOWN NEW BEDFORD.

The city’s only 19th century wooden lattice pergola anchors an acre of ornamental gardens, numerous rose varieties, hydrangeas and seasonal fruit trees. Meandering stone pathways converge on the paved patio, covered by a canopy from May through October.

Planning a different kind of event? The RJD garden and mansion make a unique and beautiful backdrop for all types of social gatherings, from retirement parties to baby showers.

Contact our Functions Coordinator to assist with the planning of your special event.
